Can you recommend a North American company that makes good moisturizers?

Based on the information provided, CeraVe is a good option. CeraVe is an American company (based in North America) and offers moisturizers such as their "Moisturizing Cream for face and body," which provides deep hydration and helps restore the skin barrier. The product is fragrance-free, hypoallergenic, and non-comedogenic, making it suitable for dry to very dry skin.

Additionally, Clinique is another North American company that offers moisturizers like "Even Better™ Brightening Moisturizer SPF20" and "Moisture Surge™ SPF 25 Sheer Hydrator," which are designed for hydration, brightening, and sun protection. However, please note that Clinique does conduct animal testing.

If you're looking for a company that does not conduct animal testing, unfortunately, none of the companies listed in the provided information meet that criterion.

What's the background of CeraVe—do they test on animals?

CeraVe itself does not test its finished products on animals. However, as a brand under L'Oréal, it is impacted by the parent company's global policies and regulatory requirements in different regions. Historically, L'Oréal has conducted animal testing only where required by law, such as in mainland China until recent regulatory changes that reduced the requirement for animal testing. CeraVe is not certified by cruelty-free organizations like Leaping Bunny or PETA's Beauty Without Bunnies due to its association with L'Oréal's global market presence and compliance with varying regulations. Cruelty-Free Kitty lists CeraVe as 'not cruelty-free' because of potential animal testing in regulated markets, which may conflict with preferences against animal testing.

Do their moisturizers contain niacinamide?

Yes, some of CeraVe's moisturizers contain niacinamide. For example, the "moisturising treatment for normal and dry skin" includes niacinamide as an active ingredient, as does the "moisturising face cream for normal to dry skin." However, not all of their moisturizers contain niacinamide, so it depends on the specific product you are considering.
