Which cruelty-free skincare brands also support social causes?

Based on the information provided, none of the cruelty-free skincare brands listed (Revolution Skincare, SKIN1004, Guinot, and Cosrx) explicitly mention support for social causes. While Revolution Skincare is recognized for its strong ethical commitment to animal welfare and maintains a significant vegan product lineup, there is no specific information about their involvement in supporting broader social causes. Similarly, SKIN1004 focuses on cruelty-free practices and sustainability but does not provide details on supporting social initiatives beyond these areas.

If you are looking for brands that explicitly support social causes in addition to being cruelty-free, you may need to look beyond the provided data or seek out additional information from other sources.

What does Revolution Skincare do in terms of community engagement or donations?

Revolution Skincare is involved in supporting social causes and community engagement. Specifically, the brand supports charities like Marie Curie, which focuses on improving care for people affected by terminal illnesses. Additionally, Revolution Skincare champions diversity through initiatives such as shade inclusivity and collaborations with male influencers. While these efforts demonstrate a commitment to social causes, there is limited information available about the extent or specifics of their donations or community programs. For more detailed insights into their social initiatives, you may want to visit their official website or contact them directly.

Are there other brands with similar values?

Based on the information provided, Revolution Skincare and BasicLab are both brands that align with your preference for products that do not involve animal testing. These companies produce vegan and dermatologically tested skincare products with a focus on effective ingredients like vitamin C, peptides, and prebiotics. If you're looking for similar values, these two brands stand out in the data provided. Let me know if you'd like more details about their specific products!
