RAG Chat Assistant

I live in Germany. Are there any local skincare brands here that don't test on animals?

Based on the information provided, none of the listed skincare brands (SKIN1004, Lumene, Cosrx, Eveline Cosmetics) are explicitly identified as German companies. However, some of these brands may still be available in Germany and align with your values regarding animal testing:

- Lumene is a Finnish brand that does not test on animals and avoids markets where animal testing is required by law (e.g., mainland China). While it is not based in Germany, it may have a presence there.
- Eveline Cosmetics, a Polish brand, is also cruelty-free and avoids markets requiring animal testing. It may be available in Germany as well.

Since you are looking for local German skincare brands that do not test on animals, you might want to explore additional options or check local stores for German-based cruelty-free brands. Many European countries have strict regulations against animal testing for cosmetics, so it is likely that other German brands adhere to these standards.

Do any of them have good options for sensitive skin?

Yes, there are good options for sensitive skin among the brands mentioned:

- Weleda Sensitive Skin Cream: This is a day and night cream designed specifically for sensitive skin. It soothes irritation, reduces redness, and provides intense hydration. The formula contains almond oil and is fragrance-free, making it gentle for sensitive or dry skin.
- Lumene HERKKÄ Soothing Toner: This toner is tailored for sensitive skin, helping to calm and hydrate the skin while reducing redness. It's enriched with Nordic bilberry water and Arctic spring water, making it a soothing choice for sensitive skin.
- BasicLab Dermocosmetics Micellis: This facial toner/emulsion is suitable for very sensitive skin. It hydrates, soothes, and regenerates the skin while reducing redness. The product contains ceramides, vitamin E, and squalane to strengthen the skin barrier and protect against external factors.

All these products are cruelty-free and cater specifically to sensitive skin needs.
