I'm trying to reduce waste in my routine. Can you recommend a brand that ships plastic-free and doesn't test on animals?

Certainly! Here are some cruelty-free and plastic-free brands across various product categories to help you reduce waste in your routine:

Personal Care Products:

1. Lush
 - What They Offer: Skincare, haircare, bath products.
 - Packaging: Plastic-free options available; many products come in recyclable or biodegradable packaging.
 - Cruelty-Free: Certified cruelty-free by Leaping Bunny and PETA.
2. Ethique
 - What They Offer: Solid bars for hair, body, and face care.
 - Packaging: Products come in compostable or recyclable paper wrap; some are package-free.
 - Cruelty-Free: Cruelty-free and vegan-friendly.
3. Plaine Products
 - What They Offer: Haircare and skincare products.
 - Packaging: Refillable glass bottles with plastic-free delivery for refills.
 - Cruelty-Free: Certified cruelty-free by Leaping Bunny.
4. The Body Shop
 - What They Offer: Skincare, haircare, and makeup.
 - Packaging: Many products use recyclable packaging; they also have a recycling program.
 - Cruelty-Free: Cruelty-free since 1989, certified by Leaping Bunny.
5. Weleda
 - What They Offer: Skincare and personal care products.
 - Packaging: Uses recyclable glass bottles and cardboard boxes.
 - Cruelty-Free: Certified cruelty-free and vegan-friendly for many products.
6. Dr. Bronner's
 - What They Offer: Multi-purpose soaps, body washes, lotions.
 - Packaging: Recyclable plastic bottles; some refills available in paper boxes.
 - Cruelty-Free: Cruelty-free and vegan-friendly.

Household Products:

1. Ecover
 - What They Offer: Cleaning products (dish soap, laundry detergent).
 - Packaging: Uses minimal, recyclable packaging; some products come in biodegradable bottles.

- Cruelty-Free: Certified cruelty-free by Leaping Bunny.

Additional Tips:

- Local Availability: Check if these brands are available locally or through online stores for convenience.
- Environmental Partnerships: Some brands collaborate with environmental organizations, which can be a good indicator of their commitment to sustainability.

These options provide a range of choices across personal care and household needs, helping you make eco-friendly and cruelty-free selections. If you need more specific recommendations based on particular products or categories, feel free to ask!

Does Weleda have refillable products or ones available in glass jars?

Weleda does not currently offer direct refillable options through their official product lines. However, many of their products are packaged in glass jars or bottles, which are recyclable and reusable. For example, their facial serums, creams, and other skincare products often come in glass containers.

If you're looking for refillable options, I recommend checking with local zero-waste stores or refill stations, as some may carry Weleda products or similar natural and cruelty-free brands in bulk or refillable packaging.

For more specific details on Weleda's packaging and sustainability practices, visit their official website or contact their customer service. They are transparent about their commitment to sustainability and cruelty-free practices!
